Hiroshima University

MIYAZAKI Seiichi, Prof., Dr. Eng.
Executive Vice President (Research)
Hiroshima University

The Network for Education and Research on Peace and Sustainability (NERPS) at Hiroshima University will host The NERPS 2027 Conference – the sixth edition of an international conference on peace and sustainability – from March 17 to 20, 2027, jointly with The National Research and Innovation Agency (BRIN), Indonesia, in Jakarta, Indonesia.

This NERPS 2027 Conference aims to bridge scholarly literature and policy lessons to contribute to transdisciplinary insights for accelerating the attainment of the goals and charting pathways beyond 2030. It also aims to contribute to a series of policy dialogues that would lead to getting peace mainstreamed into the next set of United Nations development goals, which are expected to be formulated by 2030.

The NERPS 2027 Conference offers a platform for students, researchers, and practitioners to exchange ideas, present their work, and forge partnerships for transdisciplinary research and collaborative action toward peaceful and sustainable futures. The conference will feature research presentations, expert roundtables, innovative workshops, and an optional excursion.

We are now calling for abstracts. Please visit the conference homepage:

<https://nerps.org/nerps2027-conference-in-jakarta/> .

You are encouraged to take part actively in the conference.

There will be two outlets for having your manuscripts published: the NERPS journal, Peace and Sustainability, published by Elsevier and an edited book published by Springer Nature. We encourage authors to submit their full papers to avail themselves of these publication options.

The Scientific Committee of the conference will select six best papers and six best presentations – 3 awardees in the student category and 3 awardees in the non-student category – as well as two best posters – 1 awardee in the student category and 1 awardee in the non-student category. All awards recipients will receive a certificate and gifts, as well as complimentary registration for the next NERPS conference.
